

Mrs Goldenberg's Account

New York Herald

Sunday 21 April 1912

When the crash came Mr. and Mrs. Goldenberg ran out on deck.

Mrs. Goldenberg ran out on deck. Mrs. Goldenberg, who had not waited to dress, but had only pulled a skirt over her night dress, was helped into one of the first boats by Mr. Goldenberg, Mr. Ismay and one of the Titanic's officers. She begged her husband to follow her, but he refused. The boat was unfilled when the crew started to lower it, according to Mrs. Goldenberg, and she urged her husband to take a place, as other men had done. "When I saw that he was not coming," said Mrs. Goldenberg, "I called, 'For God's sake say goodbye to me then,' and suddenly Mr. Ismay and one of the crew seized Mr. Goldenberg and threw him over the side. He managed to catch the boat ropes and I and others pulled him in..."

Courtesy of Peter Engberg

Copyright Encyclopedia Titanica - www.encyclopedia-titanica.org 1996-2015 and third parties (ref: #19267), accessed 24th July 2015 08:09:03 AM)
<http://www.encyclopedia-titanica.org/mrs-goldenberg-account-titanic-disaster-1912.html>